Be aware that Photoshop uses an architecture that is radically different from other software. Expect some headaches if you try to use Photoshop on a Mac running Apple's OS X. And it's not an inexpensive piece of software. A W-L-Y-G-H-T-D-E-F-C-T-R-E-S Who, What, Where, When, Why, How, and so on. These are the building blocks of good photographs. Knowing about the technical and visual components helps you better judge the possibilities for your photograph and understand what may make it special. Checking out the many types of images Have you ever seen a photograph and wondered what that picture is? Did you take it, or have it taken for you? Or maybe you just saw it and wondered what the photographer was thinking? How about if you saw a photo that was edited, perhaps to remove a blemish or add some shine. You may then have wondered why the editor did it. A photograph can be a single frame of a film roll or a long-term series of shots. It can be of an event (a wedding, a graduation, a vacation), an object, a scene (a field or a series of landscapes), a person (your significant other, your child, or a relative), or a piece of sculpture. What we think of as a photograph is simply one way to capture the world. Many different types of images can be made, but they all fall into one of the following categories: Soap-bubble photograph: A sheet of paper with soap floating on top. Collage: A series of images stuck or pasted on a piece of paper or a wall, which is photographed. Stamp: A canvas print with images of the places you've traveled. Portrait: A photograph of a person. Nature photograph: Any subject made up of objects in nature: trees, grass, water, sky, light and darkness, etc. Landscape photograph: A variety of subjects made up of natural elements: mountains, trees, water, hills, and even buildings. Street photography: A snapshot of the urban world around us. Reportage photography: A series of images from a single event. Abstract photo: A single photograph made up of hundreds of individual images on the picture print. Abstract painting: A photograph that is edited on software that produces an

Polls open in Slovakia's first presidential election Published duration 30 October 2017 image copyright Reuters image caption Mr Fico has served as prime minister since 2006 Polls have opened in Slovakia, with two men standing for election as the country's first president. The head of state is elected by members of the national assembly and the new president will be Slovakia's fourth leader in five years. The two hopefuls are Robert Fico and Peter Pellegrini, a former prime minister of Poland. Polls in Slovakia are expected to be close, with most analysts predicting Mr Fico to win. The results will be announced on 15 December. Mr Fico is hoping to become the first Slovak president in decades not to come from the main centre-right party in Slovakia. His Smer (Most, Common Cause) has been in coalition with the Christian Democrats since February. It had 40% of the vote in the European Parliament elections last year, rising to nearly 50% of the vote in the first round of the presidential poll. The Smer-led coalition won an absolute majority in the national assembly in October, making Mr Fico the first Slovak prime minister to win a second term. He has also been president of Slovakia in the past, but not for many years. He was prime minister between 2006 and 2010, but the role was scrapped in 2012. He was prime minister again between 2012 and 2013. image copyright EPA image caption Mr Pellegrini is competing against the incumbent president Mr Pellegrini, whose party is the only opposition party to Mr Fico's Smer, has the backing of the governing liberals. He is a former prime minister, foreign minister and has been president of Slovakia twice before, serving from 1998 to 2002 and then again from 2006 to 2013. He is seeking a second term in office. His allies want to make the presidency a full-time post, arguing that its holder should not have to also lead the country's parliament.

Q: Match two brackets I'm trying to make a script that match two brackets but a problem arises when I try to add an "else". My code is: `set /a match = (?{test="1"; test=$arg1}?|) if "%match%"=="1" (echo True) else (echo False)`

Q: check a string and return it to another page in spring mvc Possible Duplicate: How to send model object to jsp? I have a jsp page that I wish to retrieve a String from another page. My jsp page is like: I have a Spring controller method to send my form data to another controller method that returns me the String of some problem.

@RequestMapping(value = "/index.jsp", method = RequestMethod.POST) public String contactFormHandlerMethod(@ModelAttribute("contact") Contact contact, BindingResult result, ModelMap model) { String problem = "blah blah"; return problem; } From this controller method I need to return the problem to my jsp page. However, if there is nothing wrong with the form data, I don't want this contactFormHandlerMethod to return me the problem. I want to simply go to the jsp page and not having this string return me. How can I achieve this? A: I have solved the problem using following code. Spring: @RequestMapping(value = "/index.jsp", method = RequestMethod.GET) public String indexJSP(@ModelAttribute("contact") Contact contact, BindingResult result, ModelMap model) { String problem = "string"; return problem;
